TAKE A LOOK

at the four pictures on this page. Have you ever seen or heard of such a grand array of prizes being given away in a contest? These four alone amount to nearly $11,000 in value. The Fourth Prize--a $1,000 Building Lot--does not appear here, but you may rest assured that it will come up to your every expectation, both in value and otherwise. In addition to these there are 72 District Prizes, which will be given to the contestant receiving the largest number of votes in his or her respective district. The sum total of the value of these prizes will amount to over $21,000--a magnificent sum, indeed, to spend for prizes to be given away absolutely free. But this is just what The Washington Herald has done, and as it expects to profit by it in increased circulation, so are its readers expected to profit by it in the winning of one of these valuable prizes.

SPECIAL NOTICE

A building lot in Chevy Chase has just been purchased by The Washington Herald, at a cost of $2,145, and this lot will be given as a fourth grand prize in this contest. It is impossible to say more about it here, but be sure to watch Monday's issue of The Washington Herald for the complete facts.

A LITTLE CARE

should be taken by persons sending in coupons and nomination blanks to the Contest Department. Both should be trimmed neatly and the writing should be as plain as possible. Then the coupons should be put together in one package, and the number of votes contained in the package should be written on the outside. This will save an infinite deal of trouble in the counting of the votes, and will be appreciated by the Contest management. We have sought to avoid mistakes in the first count, but if any appear they may be attributed for the most part to the carelessness with which the blanks have been filled out. These mistakes will be rectified, of course, but there is no necessity for them appearing at all, and, given your co-operation, we can safely promise you that you will find no errors in the number of your votes. We wish to thank those who have entered for the good work which has been done, and will manifest our appreciation in a substantial way at the conclusion of this contest.
